POSITIVE MENTAL HEALTH IN SCHOOLS

This booklet will provide simple information to the school population that is clear, supportive and direct. It has been developed with the aim of answering some of the ongoing questions that arise within the school sector by principals, staff, students and parents.

It is important to note that this is a broad booklet that only touches on each subject as a starting point. For further information on any of the subjects mentioned please use the links provided.

Some key links for overall advice on promoting your mental health are www.yourmentalhealth.ie and www.connectingforlifecork.ie

It is extremely important to note that if you need help at any stage

as a parent, child or young adult we would encourage you to visit your local GP/or out of hours: SOUTH DOC on 1850 335 999 service or Emergency Department

PROMOTING POSITIVE MENTAL HEALTH

This booklet was originally developed by Kinsale Youth Support Service (KYSS) with the aim of helping and supporting young people by providing information and promoting understanding of the challenges that young people within our community are faced with. KYSS operate as a beacon for young people and their families in Kinsale and the surrounding areas by promoting general wellbeing which includes positive physical and mental health.

This booklet provides information on mental health and highlights the services that are available when help is needed. You can also log on to www.yourmentalhelath.ie or www.kyss.ie for more information on any of the issues or services discussed in this booklet. I want to acknowledge Dr E Longergan from HSE CKCH mental health for all his help and expertise in the Document and all other contributors across all sectors.

When our mental health is well we can enjoy day to day life and we can get the best out of things. If it is not so good, help is available.

What Is Mental Health?

Mental Health is related to all of the other dimensions of health and is defined as 'a state of well-being in which the individual realises his or her own abilities, can cope with the normal stresses of life, can work productively, and is able to make a contribution to his or her community' (WHO, 2001).

Mental health is something we all have and something that is important to look after. Some people have described good mental health as a feeling of:

Minding your mental health:

It is often the little things that can make the biggest difference to our mental health. Here are some little things that can help you to maintain good mental health, and which can help us when we start to feel down.

- Get involved and try out new things
- Keep active and eat healthy
- Appreciate what you have
- Accept yourself for who you are
- Develop your creative side
- Stay in touch with friends and family
- Talk to someone you trust
- Find some time each day to relax
- Set little and small goals and work towards them
- Ask for and accept help

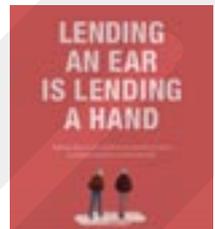

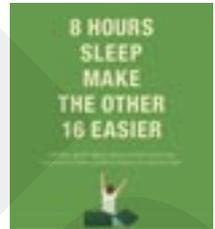

Little Things Campaign

The HSE, National Office for Suicide Prevention (NOSP) and over 20 national partner organisations launched a new mental health and wellbeing campaign in Autumn 2014. This evidence-based campaign marks a new approach to mental health which focuses on education, attitude and marked change. These posters and all other national mental health campaigns and materials are available through www.yourmentalhealth.ie

This campaign aims to:

- Change attitudes and behaviour relating to mental health
- Convey the idea that ups and downs are normal and experienced by everyone
- Inform people that there are things they can do to help themselves and to help others
- Direct people to www.yourmentalhealth.ie and the Samaritans' new Freephone 116123 for a listening ear and emotional support

How to Spot Symptoms of Poor Mental Health

Everyday stresses that come with work, school, family and friends can make you irritable, un-motivated or withdrawn. This is normal and these feelings usually pass. However, if they don't go away or if you notice changes in your behaviour or the behaviour of someone you know, talk to someone about your concerns. You could talk about your concerns with a parent, friend, teacher, youth worker or your GP. You can also call a confidential helpline such as the Samaritans on free phone 116123. It's important to remember to not keep concerns about your feelings or concerns about someone you know to yourself because supports are there for you when you need them.

Some signs and symptoms to look out for include:

- Withdrawal from friends, family, school or work
- Changes in mood or unusual responses to situations
- Changes in sleep patterns.
This could be too much or too little sleep
- Changes in eating patterns.
Again this could be eating too much or too little.
- Doing things that don't make sense to others
- Seeing or hearing things that others don't

If you notice these changes in yourself or others, it might feel a bit scary but don't worry – help is always available and IT'S OK TO ASK FOR HELP.

Depression

Everyone occasionally feels down or sad, but these feelings usually pass within a couple of days. We often use the expression 'I'm feeling depressed' when we're feeling sad or miserable about life but these feelings normally pass with time. If these feelings are interfering with your life and don't go away after a couple of days, or if they come back, over and over again, it could be a sign that you are depressed in the medical sense of the term.

Some symptoms of depression could include:

- Persistent sadness, anxious or 'empty' feelings
- Feelings of hopelessness and/or pessimism
- Feelings of guilt and/or worthlessness
- Helplessness
- Irritability and/or restlessness
- Loss of interest in activities or hobbies once enjoyed
- Fatigue and decreased energy
- Difficulty concentrating, remembering details and making decisions
- Insomnia, early-morning wakefulness
- Excessive sleeping
- Overeating or appetite loss
- Thoughts of suicide and/or suicide attempts
- Persistent aches or pains, headaches

Anxiety and Obsessive Compulsive Disorder (OCD)

Anxiety: Everybody gets anxious at some point in their life. Anxiety is a feeling of worry, nervousness, un-easiness, feeling faint, sweating, having jelly legs and feeling your heart racing. When these symptoms get really bad it may lead to a panic attack. Panic attacks can be extremely frightening however they are harmless and very treatable. Anxiety can affect both your physical health and your mental health (your behaviour, feelings and emotions). The symptoms of anxiety may pass quickly or may stay for a long period of time. It may be worth talking to your doctor or a counsellor about ways to reduce anxiety.

OCD: OCD is a form of anxiety where a person feels they have to do things repeatedly to prevent bad things happening to themselves or others. An example of this would be washing your hands repeatedly, switching lights on and off repeatedly. It is only when this behaviour gets in the way of your daily life that you may need to seek help.

Some common effects of anxiety and OCD include:

- Feeling short of breath
- Difficulty getting to sleep
- Dry mouth and difficulty swallowing
- Repeated actions
- Pounding heart
- Sweating and trembling
- Muscle tension and headaches
- Jelly legs

If you or a friend has some, or any of the symptoms, please see:

Eating Disorders

Eating disorders are often not primarily about food, but can be seen as a way of coping with emotional distress or other underlying issues. For the person with an eating disorder, controlling food and their body is their way of trying to relieve distress and an attempt to achieve some degree of control over their life. Eating disorders can affect anybody, male or female. With appropriate help and support, people can, and do, recover from eating disorders. Eating disorders can be complex. This being said, there are variations in the typical signs and not all symptoms will apply to all people.

Signs and Symptoms include:

- Body and mind are starved
- Making yourself sick
- Feeling worthless
- Binge eating
- Excessive thinking and talking about food
- Refusal to eat enough
- Fear of being overweight
- Being underweight
- Weight going up & down
- Trying to be 'perfect'

Eating Disorders do not include food allergies or illnesses of the digestive system. However, if you are concerned about changes in your eating behaviour or of those of a friend, contact your GP to check it out.

It is important to remember that there is help available! With appropriate help and support, people can and do recover from eating disorders.

Help is at hand!

Relationships and Sexuality

Exploring your sexuality and developing relationships can be a positive but challenging experience during teenage years. Society can place a lot of labels on people - especially in relation to sexuality and relationships. At a stage where you are exploring this for yourself it is important that you take time to understand your own feelings. There are a broad range of sexual orientations including: heterosexual, bisexual, gay, lesbian and transgender. As part of someone exploring their sexuality, it is common that people to go through a range of feelings and experiences before their sexual identity emerges. It is also important to remember that you do not have to fit into one of these labels, as everyone is unique and different. You may also think that you are sure of your sexual identity, but it may change and it's important to remember that is normal. If you feel you need support, or someone to listen to you in a non judgmental way.

Bullying and Abuse

Bullying can be described as the ongoing abuse of another person through physical, emotional or verbal means, often in the presence of others. Nobody has the right to hurt you physically or emotionally even if they are in a position of authority or they say they love you. Abuse is wrong. Always refuse to accept abuse and remember that secrecy is often an abusers best weapon, so NEVER KEEP IT A SECRET and remember HELP IS ALWAYS AVAILABLE. The most important thing is to tell somebody you trust. When somebody does something to control, bully or hurt someone else it is called abuse.

Abuse can take many forms such as physical, sexual, emotional and verbal abuse:

Physical Abuse: Is control by violence or threat of violence including hitting, biting, burning or shaking

Sexual Abuse: When someone forces another to do any sexual acts that they do not want to do or watch something sexual that they do not want to watch

Emotional Abuse: Controlling another person through withdrawal of love, isolating them, becoming extremely jealous, constantly criticising or threatening them

Verbal Abuse: Is putting a person down and undermining their confidence by using threats, insults, name calling or shouting

Racism and Discrimination

Racism is the belief that one group of people is superior to another. It accounts for people believing that differences in people's character or ability are due to someone's ethnicity. It relates to any action, practice, policy, law, speech, or incident which has the effect (whether intentional or not) of undermining anyone's enjoyment of their human rights.

Discrimination is treating someone less favourably. The Irish Equal Status Acts 2000-2015 defines discrimination under the following 9 grounds:

- Gender
- Civil Status
- Family Status
- Sexual Orientation
- Religion
- Age
- Disability
- Race
- Membership of the Traveller Community

Psychosis

Some drugs such as hallucinogens, marijuana and amphetamines may trigger a psychotic episode. If someone becomes very confused and appears out of touch with everyone else's perception of the world, they may be experiencing a psychotic episode.

They may:

- Have hallucinations
- Strange and disorganised thinking
- Hearing voices that may not be heard by anybody else
- Have false beliefs known as delusions
- Strange and disorganised behaviour
- May appear quite flat
- Have difficulty speaking
- Experience paranoia

Treatment of psychosis usually involves medication, and if someone is experiencing a psychotic episode, it is important that they seek help from a doctor, psychiatrist or a clinical psychologist.

Schizophrenia

Schizophrenia is a serious mental illness characterised by disturbances in a person's thoughts, perceptions, emotions and behaviour. It affects approximately one in every hundred people worldwide.

There are a number of signs and symptoms. They are divided into two groups: 'active symptoms' that reflect new or unusual forms of thought and behaviour such as delusions, and 'passive symptoms' which reflect a loss of previous feelings and abilities.

Some signs and symptoms:

- Having hallucinations
- Strange and disorganised thinking
- Hearing voices that may not be heard by anyone
- Having false beliefs known as delusions
- Experiencing paranoia
- May appear quite flat
- Strange and disorganised behaviour
- Having difficulty speaking

Self-Harm and Suicide

What is self-harm?

Self-harm is when someone deliberately hurts, cuts or injures him/herself. Self-harm is a communication of deep distress. Any form of self-harm is a call for help and should be taken seriously. If you self-harm it is very important that you seek help and support. It might seem that nobody understands what you're going through, or that you are alone, but remember there is help available.

What is suicide?

Suicide is often not chosen; it happens when pain exceeds resources for coping with pain. You are not weak, crazy or a bad person because you feel suicidal or are having suicidal thoughts. It doesn't even mean that you really want to die - it only means that you have more pain than you can cope with right now and that you may not see the other options available to you.

If you are feeling suicidal or want to end your life, it is important that you keep yourself safe. Try to remember that thoughts about taking your life are just thoughts. They do not mean you have to act on them, no matter how overwhelming they are. The most important thing to do if you are having thoughts of suicide is to talk to someone. Reach out to someone who can help. It is okay to ask for help.

If you are concerned that someone is having suicidal thoughts, speak openly to them about suicide, show you care and listen.

Grief

To grieve is a normal part of life and it a very personal journey and more importantly it takes time. It is normal to feel a sense of shock when someone close to you has died. Experiencing shock can mean you have a physical and an emotional reaction. You may feel dizzy, nauseous, dazed, numb or empty.

Everybody grieves differently and lots of things can affect the way people experience grief. As the shock and numbness lessens, you are likely to start grieving. There are different factors that may affect the way people grieve. Knowing these may help to understand yours and other people's reactions to the loss. If someone's reaction is different to yours, it does not necessarily mean they care less.

Some of the things you may feel or experience after losing someone:

- Loneliness
- Challenges to beliefs
- Changes in appetite
- Anger
- Not wanting to be around people
- Despair and hopelessness
- Changes in your sleeping pattern
- Sadness
- Lack of concentration

Some reasons why people grieve differently:

The type of relationship they had with the person.

Gender: males and females may have different ways of managing their grief. Males are more likely to feel restrained while females are more likely to share their feelings

Cultural background: cultural groups express grief in different ways

Other losses: the new loss may bring up previous loss – which can trigger more grief.

It is important to remember that no matter how you grieve, help is always available.

Encourage a person to get help

It is important to note that In Ireland it is illegal to drink before the age of 18yrs. However this booklet aims to provide clear Information on the effect alcohol has on your mental health and your health in general.

It's reassuring to know that most young people in Ireland don't abuse alcohol or drugs but, for some, using substances at this time in their lives can give rise to all kinds of problems.

For a Practical Guide for parents and young people please go to www.askaboutalcohol.ie

What is alcohol?

Alcohol is a drug found in all alcoholic drinks like beer, wine and spirits such as vodka and whiskey. Alcohol is a depressant drug. It slows down various sections of the brain and the central nervous system. This affects your ability to control your behaviour and your bodily functions, like thinking, talking, walking and even breathing.

Alcohol and Young People's Mental Health

Young people are particularly vulnerable when it comes to alcohol's effects on mental health, as their brains are still developing.

For all alcohol related information please go to www.askaboutalcohol.ie

Alcohol as a way to cope for teenagers

Part of being a teenager is finding our own way to cope with tough times, to manage when things go wrong and to handle our feelings. Every time we deal with hard situations or negative emotions, we get stronger and more resilient, so we are better able to cope the next time. However, if we rely on alcohol, we may miss out on developing coping skills and resilience, which can leave us isolated or vulnerable when we are older.

Alcohol and social skills... the time of your life?

Making friends, starting romantic relationships and having fun with your friends are big parts of being a teenager. When it's going well, it can be the best time of your life, but the teenage years can also be a time of self-doubt, needing to fit in and anxiety about not being confident enough, popular enough or attractive enough.

How does alcohol fit in?

Alcohol can be a quick-fix for young people as they try to deal with these situations and feelings as alcohol gives a sense of confidence, freedom from worries and a feeling of fitting in with the group. Unfortunately, the quick fix can make things worse in the longer term. Relying on alcohol can mean a young person misses out on developing the true confidence that comes from learning social skills and building real relationships. They may find it hard to have fun or socialise without alcohol.

Alcohol can also affect a young person's self-esteem if they embarrass themselves while drunk, engage in risky behaviours or do things they regret. And in the age of social-media sharing, drunken bad behaviour can become public knowledge, leading to shame and lasting stigma.

Alcohol and brain development

Teenagers' brains are still developing. Drinking alcohol while the brain is still developing can damage two key parts of the brain: the area responsible for logic, reasoning, self-regulation and judgement, and an area of the brain related to learning and memory. This damage can then impact on a young person's thinking, functioning and behaviour in the long term.

Risk-taking and acting on impulse

Alcohol as a drug can increase our tendency to take risks and act on impulse, without thinking about the consequences for everybody. It can also affect our judgement and our ability to spot danger or react to it. Mixing a teenager's natural lack of inhibition with the effects of alcohol can greatly increase the chances of a young person having an accident, being exploited, doing something they regret or hurting themselves or someone else. Therefore Teens are generally more likely than adults to make impulsive, emotional decisions without thinking about the consequences – The parts of the brain responsible for impulse control don't fully mature until we're in our mid-20s. Alcohol increases the chance of risky behaviour, as it lowers inhibitions, increases impulsiveness and makes decision-making worse.

Alcohol and mental health problems

Alcohol is associated with a range of negative mental health conditions and symptoms in young people. A recent study in Ireland found that young people who drank heavily were far more likely to have more serious symptoms of depression, anxiety and stress.¹

Increasing risk of dependence

There is increasing evidence that the earlier someone starts drinking the more likely they are to drink harmfully or develop a drug or alcohol problem later in life.

PROMOTING POSITIVE MENTAL HEALTH

Ways to look after a young person's mental health if you care for a young person:

- Stay close to them - know where they are, what they are doing and keep in touch with how they are feeling
- Try to support them in finding healthy activities and ways to cope
- Make them aware of services that they can use if they are feeling low, such as Childline (freephone listening service), Spunout.ie (youth information and support website) and Reachout.com (mental health support)
- Set a good example with alcohol – don't give the message that alcohol is a good way to cope with difficulties and don't allow them to drink

Note to underage Drinking

Signs and symptoms of excessive drinking:

You may have a problem with your alcohol use if you are:

- Drinking to numb how you feel
- Getting into hassle at school, work or home
- Feeling hung-over most mornings
- Thinking about drinking most days
- Feeling edgy for no apparent reason
- Drinking to escape problems
- Drinking to get drunk
- Drinking more to get the same effect that you used to get
- Drinking alone

What is a standard drink?

In Ireland a standard drink has about 10 grams of pure alcohol in it. In the UK a standard drink, also called a unit of alcohol, has about 8 grams of pure alcohol.

What are the low-risk drinking guidelines?

Low risk weekly guidelines for adults are:

- 11 standard drinks in a week for women
- 17 standard drinks in a week for men

Caution: These guidelines do not apply to people who are ill, run down, on medication or to children. It is not advisable for women to consume alcohol if pregnant or trying to conceive.

ALCOHOL: Don't bottle it, tackle it.

Drugs

While there is a lot of concern about illegal drugs, the most harm and the greatest risk to young people comes from using legal drugs such as alcohol, cigarettes and the inappropriate use of medicines (over-the-counter and/or prescription). People use many different kinds of drugs. These drugs may be legal or illegal, helpful or harmful. Every drug has side-effects and risks, but some drugs have more risks than others, especially illegal drugs.

Using drugs can become a problem depending on a number of factors:

- What drug is used
- Who is using the drug (especially their mood and personality)
- Why they are using the drug
- Where and how they are using the drug

Using drugs can have both immediate and long-term effects. These effects may vary from person to person. Some immediate and long-term effects of drugs include:

- Losing Interest
- Getting the munchies
- Difficulties with memory and attention
- Problems with your mental health
- Having to use more to get the same effect
- Feeling of been overwhelmed and not being able to cope problems
- Feelings of paranoia
- Anxiety
- Depression
- Panic attacks
- Legal problems

Youth Mental Health Services in Cork

Jigsaw One to One Support:

Jigsaw Cork is a free, non-judgemental and confidential mental health support service for young people aged 12-25. Jigsaw provide therapeutic guidance and support for young people who are going through a difficult or distressing time.

Jigsaw is a youth friendly service and young people can self-refer or be referred by concerned adults/professionals who engage with young people.

Jigsaw workshops:

Jigsaw Cork also engages in education, training and awareness raising work within the community. Jigsaw know that the community is vital in helping to support young people with their mental health and with aims to strengthen the confidence and competence of young people, their families, and communities to support young people's mental health.

What is the Youth Advisory Panel?

Jigsaw has a Youth Advisory Panel which is a team of volunteers aged 16-25 who work to improve the service and influence how Jigsaw supports young people in the community. Members of the youth advisory Panel are from all over Cork with diverse backgrounds, a variety of interests and skills, and a passion for youth mental health. They are central to the work of Jigsaw and are involved in everything from interviewing new staff, designing the hub, to organising and representing Jigsaw at community events.

If you would like more information or have a query regarding any of the above please do not hesitate to contact on:
